The scenario history of New Mexico. The scenario is to be enacted by the public school children of the state. The schools in each of the larger towns are to stage one scene or act beginning with the prehistoric period, passing through the Spanish conquest, the reconquest and the Mexican period up to the American invasion and the present. It can readily be seen how the history of the Sunshine state lends itself to the great spectacular play to be acted before a moving picture machine for reproduction at the San Diego exposition. Each scene should chime for reproduction at the San Diego exposition. Each scene should be described in detail, the costuming and grouping of the tableaux as well as the action suitable for moving picture reproduction. The mission play as given in California may serve as a model to a certain extent. The Santa Fe schools will probably be asked to stage the reconquest by De Vargas; Valencia county may probably produce a Mexican hacienda scene and thus different sections will furnish the background and local certains the background and local certain government and investments will be shown separately all the different tunds, and in each case cash and securities will be shown. Another fruitful suggestion is that of Educational Raily day to be held in each county at the same time as the county institute. Inspirational addresses are to be made on that occasion when teachers, school directions, school patrons and school children will join in mass meetings that are to be photographed to give visible evidence to the seven million visitors to the San Diego exposition of the enthusiastic school spirit that pregalis in every section of the state. Another series of pictures is to be taken of athletic events, of May featily productions as the "Pastures," further testifying to the fact that the schools of New Mexico are alive to the modern spirit. There are also to be photographs for reproduction on stereopticon slides of modern school gardens of the children at work and some difficulty arises when attempt is made to compare the debt of the different states.
